In the era of TikTok and Instagram, teenagers often start their fitness journeys in the wrong place. They build workouts around information gleaned from 90-second social-media posts by uncredentialed fitness influencers who don't truly understand the science of muscle and strength. The resulting fitness routines are typically not optimized for teenaged bodies as they grow. The result: frustration, which can manifest in many ways in the social media era. When kids become unhealthily obsessed with fitness, that frustration can transform into questionable supplement usage – and, sometimes, body dysmorphia. The problem with Instagram strength advice is that it can often lead you to do exercises that simply don't get you the gains you truly want. For teens in particular, too many social-media-driven workouts can lead to poor training fundamentals, which curtail their gains in the long term. Worst of all, these flashy routines invite an overall lack of results: plenty of influencers deliver quick bodyweight ab workouts, but that won't get teens the washboard abs they seek. It's for all these reasons that some might tell you not to let your teen strength train at all. But that's not the best solution. Choosing the right plan helps to keep teens from spending hours upon hours in the weight room, leaving plenty of time for active social lives and classroom gains, too.

La fiecare sfârșit de mai sau început de iunie, luam la rând străzile cu tei. Într-o seară, când Bucureștiul mirosea a ceainărie, ne plimbam la șosea, pe sub teii bătrâni de acolo, iar apoi pe străzile puțin umbrate din preajmă, și el mi-a propus, cu totul neașteptat, un concurs de fugă. Strada se întindea în fața noastră pustie și dreaptă, ca o pistă de alergare. Mă simțeam în stare să-l bat, mi-am suflecat rochia de vară și, la semnal, am luat-o la fugă ca din pușcă. Poate aș fi reușit să termin prima, nu știu, pentru că după scurt timp am alunecat și am plonjat, julindu-mă pe palma stângă și tare, pe umărul drept. "Ar trebui să te vezi acum! Cât de rău îmi pare că nu te poți privi! Și, de fapt, ar trebui să te privească toată lumea, nu numai eu!" "Doamne ferește! Parcă văd un film viral pe internet! Mai ai și alte idei din astea?" Și iar râdeam.
